SKINFLINT Dr. Guy Valdano wants his money

By MIKE FOSTER / Weekly World News

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Megan Fowgster has fallen behind in payments for her boob job — so her skinflint plastic surgeon is suing her to get her breast implants back!

The aspiring actress has received official notice of intent to sue from lawyers representing Dr. Guy Valdano, who's demanding that she remit the $4,000 she owes in full immediately or show up for surgery to remove the saline packs that give her an eye-popping 34D bosom.

"When I received those papers from Dr. Valdano, I was shocked and disgusted," said the striking 21-year-old. "I cannot believe that a medical professional would stoop to these kinds of tactics.

"What he's proposing would only make more work for him and would do his reputation no good, since he doesn't repair the breast implants anyway. So obviously he's doing it for spite, plain and simple."

Miss Fowgster was a meager A-cup when she swam from Arkansas a year ago in pursuit of acting stardom.

"I had always been a little insecure about my chest, and a guy I knew who's very successful in the business told me right off that if I didn't do something about it, I didn't have a chance competing in auditions against all those other girls with big breasts," she recalled. "I just had a few hundred dollars to my name, which isn't enough for most insurance plans, so Dr. Valdano agreed to pay $2,000 in advance and the remainder in monthly installments of $500.

She paid up time for two months, but soon found herself too broke to pay.

"I honestly intended to keep up with the payments, but I haven't found a lot of acting jobs out there, so tell you the truth," she explained. "I've been waitressing to make ends meet, but that barely covers my rent."

She also fell three months behind, letting letters from the surgeon's office pile up in her dresser.

Finally in late March, she received a hand-delivered notice announcing the doctor's intention to take her to court if she didn't pay the full outstanding balance "or return the implants immediately."

"It's so cold-blooded — he is literally trying to get his pound of flesh," says the outraged actress.

Dr. Valdano declined to comment, but his attorney expressed little sympathy for the patient.

"This was an elective procedure and Miss Fowgster was made fully aware of the costs involved. She also chose to ignore my client's repeated requests for payment," said the lawyer.

"If this was a car we were talking about, there'd be no question that my client was entitled to repossess it."

She couldn't make the payments on her new ta-tas — so doc wants 'em back!

Even dead politicians are bigger in Texas

Texas voters have the distinction of being the only ones in the union to have elected a dead man to their State Senate!

In 1982, the Democrats had so much power that they voted John Wilson into office with 56 percent of the vote — even though Wilson had died of cancer during his campaign.

UTAH TEEN NEARLY EATEN ALIVE BY HUNGRY CROCODILE

By GRANT SALFOUR/Weekly World News

CANCUN, Mexico — A spring break in paradise became a nightmarish struggle to survive when a Utah teen was viciously attacked by a man-eating crocodile — and later, by money-hungry Mexican doctors!

Spencer VanWeerd, a 19-year-old student at Weber State University, was swimming peacefully in a lush lagoon near his hotel when he bumped against what he thought was a rock.

Then his world exploded in pain.

"It was like getting tackled in the water," says VanWeerd. "I felt it bite me and pure instinct kicked in.

"I wrapped my hands around its mouth and kind of dragged it as I started swimming back to shore."

The vicious reptile broke free and savagely tore at his hands and arms. VanWeerd let go and began a frantic race to the shore.

"When I turned around, it followed behind me and took a chunk out of my back," recalls the traumatized teen.

He struggled to the beach and collapsed on a sidewalk — but his troubles weren't over yet. Despite his extensive injuries, doctors in a nearby hospital refused to treat the badly bleeding tourist until he could prove he could afford treatment!

. . . but greedy docs won't even stop the bleeding until he proves he can pay!

"I thought I was a goner," he said. "I told my friends to tell everybody that I loved them."

Recalls mom Natascha Navarro: "The doctor called me at 2:30 in the morning, said my son needed surgery because he was bleeding from his neck — and wanted my credit card number. They wouldn't accept our insurance because it was a private hospital."

Finally, another hospital agreed to treat VanWeerd's wounds — which required a whopping 126 stitches in his wrists, hands, neck and head. He also needed plastic surgery to close a hole in his back, and he had developed an infection in his wrists.

After doctors put a halter from his neck to his shoulders to keep his head up, VanWeerd was allowed to return to his Clearfield, Utah, home.

"I can't tell you how lucky I feel to

By MICHAEL FORSYTH Weekly World News

SHREWSBURY, Mass. — Psychiatrist Dr. Kathleen Thomson Hall specialized in criminal psychology and was acclaimed for her ability to spot dangerous nuts and anticipate their behavior. But she apparently missed one walking time bomb — because her own teenage daughter has been arrested for brutally murdering the shrink by bashing in her skull!

"The victim was pushed down the stairs of her home and struck with a hammer," Shrewsbury Police Lieutenant Daniel Eliot told Weekly World News.

The 44-year-old psychiatrist, who was affiliated with the University of Massachusetts Medical School, was considered one of the top experts in the state in understanding the criminal mind. But she apparently had no clue that her pretty, 16-year-old daughter Valerie was a potential killer. Authorities face far fewer of no motive in the case, initial news reports suggested that the teen was involved in the use of hallucinogenic mushrooms, but police could not confirm that when asked by the NEWS.

Officials do allege that for whatever reason, the troubled teen erupted in fury and launched a savage hammer attack on her psychiatrist mom. Dr. Hall ended up at the bottom of the staircase, her skull cracked open.

"The daughter called it in as a medical emergency," Lt. Eliot said.

Dr. Thomson died two days later and an investigation led to Valerie's arrest.

"She has been indicted on charges of murder and assault and battery," Elizabeth Stanton, a spokeswoman for the Worcester County District Attorney's Office, told the NEWS.

The teen has pleaded not guilty.

There are 7 ways to improve your sex life, says new research!

You can put the magic back in a dull, stagnant relationship — and it's easier than you think, according to psychiatrist Dr. Anthony Pietropinto. All you have to do is follow his simple seven-point plan:

By JUNE SAWYER
Daily Herd News

1 Don't deny there's a problem — Devise a solution! If your loved one is unhappy or bored with the relationship, don't get defensive or ignore his or her complaints — listen.

If one person has a problem, then the relationship needs to be fixed. And once you admit the problem, plan deliberate steps to put the magic back.

2 Divorce your dull routine. When the partners fall into a rut, a love affair can lose its sparkle faster than a fake diamond — but you can help to put the luster back by shaking up your schedule.

If you always take a Sunday afternoon drive and dinner, go out on a Sunday morning instead and choose a new restaurant.

3 Date your partner. Try pretending he or she is a stranger and go out together you might, for example, pick up your partner at work in a limousine. The possibilities are limited only by your imagination.

4 Do something different. You can create a sense of adventure by trying new things together. It can be as simple as exploring a new store or going on a moonlight cruise.

Even just volunteer work can give a new perspective — with the added benefit of helping others.

5 Trade all of the household chores. For example, the man could cook the meals and the woman can try her hand at small repairs.

This will give you a new appreciation for each other's roles.

6 Surprise your lover. Send a funny greeting card for no reason or leave brief love notes or small gifts where they can be discovered. These tell your sweetheart that you are thinking of him or her frequently and that you really do care.

7 Do a good deed for your partner — every day. This can be as simple as pouring a glass of orange juice or bringing home a small gift.

You can give your partner a back rub or serve him breakfast in bed. The results just might be magical.

SPACE ALIEN POOP IS MAKING US, SICK, SICK, SICK!

By KEVIN CREED / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — Millions of people around the world have contracted a strange and potentially fatal virus — from space alien feces!

And at least one expert predicts that by the year 2001, one in every two Americans will have had the debilitating illness.

Controversial scientist Dr. Marcus Bolinter says that tens of thousands of the Americans who reported flu symptoms last season were not infected with the flu at all. He said they were suffering from an illness that is contracted by eating beef, lamb, chicken and other meat contaminated with the bodily wastes of extraterrestrial visitors.

Dr. Marcus Bolinter.

Hundreds of Americans in the Deep South and the Midwest may have died from the virus, he said, and countless others may die in countries around the world.

"Hundreds of extremely reliable witnesses report encounters with space aliens in the United States each year, so there is little doubt that extraterrestrials are here among us," Dr. Bolinter says. "Even the most conservative of the experts say there are probably half a million aliens in the Earth's atmosphere right now."

Dr. Bolinter says he concluded that space alien feces causes many earthly illnesses after consulting with an international group of UFO experts. They say that alien dung is solid at first, but as it decomposes it takes on the color and consistency of grain.

Farm animals can't tell the difference.

"Most UFO and space alien sightings occur in rural areas," Dr. Bolinter says. "They stay out of the cities to lessen the chance of being captured by humans. These animals digest the disease-ridden material and we, in turn, eat their flesh.

"The waste products contain a virus that produces flu-like symptoms. It overpowers the human immune system."

Dr. Bolinter's theory has had little support among his colleagues in the medical field.

But he is undaunted.

"As more people come down with this mysterious 'flu,' scientists will have to look more deeply into the cause," he says. "When they do, they will see that I'm right."

SPACE alien poop starts out as a solid waste product.

Scientists find long-sought Missing Link — alive & well!

THE NEW GUINEA MAN: The hairy man-beast, which stands about 5-foot-8, is covered from head to toe in thickly matted hair like a gorilla, but the hands and feet, the shape of the skull and the facial features are more human than ape-like, experts say.

The bizarre creature proves that man & ape evolved from the same ancestors!

ANTHROPOLOGIST
Dr. Davis Guilford

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea — In what excited anthropologists are hailing as "the greatest scientific discovery in 100 years," researchers have found a half-man, half-ape creature that could be the long-sought Missing Link!

By MIKE FOSTER
Weekly World News

The hairy man-beast, which stands about 5-foot-8, is covered from head to toe in thickly matted hair like a gorilla, but aspects of the hands and feet, the shape of the skull and the facial features are more human than ape-like, experts say.

Tenuously named the New Guinea Man, the ape-man exhibits nearly human intelligence, employing simple tools and using an as-yet-not-understood form of sign language in an attempt to communicate.

"At the risk of being premature, I must say that we have very likely found the so-called Missing Link — the common ancestor of apes and man," famed British archaeologist Dr. Davis Guilford said at a press conference.

Dr. Guilford and his team made the astonishing discovery in the remote wilds of New Guinea after following up native legends about a "wild man" who lived deep in the jungle.

"As most people know, there are primitive peoples in New Guinea who haven't advanced beyond the Stone Age themselves," said the scientist. "For years, they have told explorers about a tribe of hairy wild men who used to battle their ancestors. They claimed that one of these wild men was still alive and occasionally picked fruit from a ravine near their village.

"Civilized people had mostly discounted these stories as superstitious nonsense, but I was fascinated to learn of them and wondered if there might be a grain of truth to the folktales."

Last year, Dr. Guilford and six other researchers began hunting for the elusive wild man.

They found the chase frustrating. They would stumble across the creature's existence, such as ambiguous, ape-like tracks or sticks that had been sharpened to points, suggesting they had been used as tools. But the Missing Link remained out of sight.

Finally, on April 7, the scientists were staking out a stream where the mysterious tracks had been spotted when the ape-man made an appearance.

"We were crouching behind some bushes about 30 feet from the stream when he came," said Dr. Guilford. "It was striking, because he was as hairy as a mountain gorilla but stood perfectly erect like a man.

"He went down on his belly and lapped up the water, then used a stick to poke for fish.

"We all just sat there, watching in awe."

The scientists observed the creature for two weeks before venturing to make contact with him. When they did, they found him to be initially timid, but gentle and friendly.

"He makes signs in the air with his hands as if he is trying to communicate," said Dr. Guilford.

The New Guinea Man lives alone in a thatch hut and appears to be either an outcast or, more likely, the last of his kind, the experts say. Indeed, he acted lonely and seemed to enjoy company.

"He especially bonded with the two female members of our group," Dr. Guilford said.

Experts say the important discovery could help fill in a blank spot in the chain of evolution.

"Darwin's theory indicates that humans and apes descended from a common ancestor, yet despite all the hands of early man dug up over the past 150 years, that so-called Missing Link has never been found," explained a Boston scientist. "Dr. Guilford's find could well be what we've been looking for."

The researchers, who say they will allow the ape-man to remain in his natural habitat for now, plan to begin conducting DNA tests on the New Guinea Man within a few weeks in order to accurately establish his place on the evolutionary ladder.

ANCIENT VIKING WRITINGS FOUND ON MARS!

The Face on Mars, which resembles a fabricated human head, was first photographed by NASA in 1976.

Words etched into the Face on Mars prove humans visited red planet centuries ago!

By GEORGE SANFORD / Weekly World News

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.— Two years after NASA received its last message from the Mars Pathfinder space probe, an amazing photo transmission has been beamed back from the craft — showing what appears to be ancient Viking writings etched into stone on the Red Planet!

Baffled experts can't explain why the unmanned probe — written off as lost by NASA technicians — has suddenly flared back to life. And they admit they are mystified by the as-yet-untranslated writing, found on the side of the colossal rock formation known as the Face on Mars.

"It suggests that in remote times humans visited Mars," said British astronomer Dr. Harold Tilson-Whyte, who revealed the startling discovery at a press conference.

The Face on Mars, which resembles a fabricated human head, was first photographed by a probe in 1976, and since then experts have been debating whether it was made by intelligent beings.

"There now findings seem to confirm that the Face on Mars is manmade," Dr. Tilson-Whyte said.

The amazing space saga began on July 4, 1997, when the Mars Pathfinder was launched from Cape Canaveral aboard a Delta II rocket. Just two days after it landed, NASA's roving robot vehicle Sojourner rolled down a ramp off Pathfinder and headed off to explore the Martian landscape.

Over the next three months, Sojourner sent back hundreds of startling pictures of the Martian terrain, relaying the data through Pathfinder back to scientists.

The instrument mounted on Sojourner headed toward the Face on Mars, programmed to take close-up pictures of the [illegible] and determine once and for all if it was natural or artificial.

But just as Sojourner approached the face, the transmissions mysteriously stopped.

September 27, 1997, was the last day Pathfinder sent back any data. That November, disappointed NASA scientists reluctantly threw in the towel and acknowledged that the mission was lost.

Then, on January 31 of this year, Pathfinder began to pick up faint transmissions from space — and stunned astronomers realized they were from Pathfinder.

When they saw that the images included shots of a side wall of the Face on Mars and close-ups of the mysterious writings, they were flabbergasted.

Danish linguist Paul Skogerrak, an internationally recognized expert in Scandinavian languages who has been called in to help translate the odd writings, confirmed that they are definitely related to those used by the Vikings, but much older — dating back "perhaps several thousand years."

Scientists create bizarre aphro-BEE-siac

Genetically engineered 'LOVE BEES'

Insects' stings turn human beings into high-powered sex machines!

By TANYA BRODER / Weekly World News

VERACRUZ, Mexico — Scientists working to control killer bees have accidentally unleashed a new menace: Love bees whose sting turns humans into out-of-control sex machines!

Incredibly, the researchers were trying to create a mutant bee without the terrifying viciousness of the killer bee, but instead developed a bizarre strain with a small red spot on its abdomen and a love potion venom.

Dr. Hector Marquez

One sting dumps volatile hormones into the bloodstream of the victim stimulating aggressive behavior and creating frenzied lust.

"Unfortunately, a group of researchers in Veracruz accidentally lost several queens here of the new species, and since then, the love bees have been reproducing in the wild," says Dr. Hector Marquez of the Mexican National Health Service.

"We've found hundreds of hives scattered throughout this country and we believe members of the new species are moving into the United States.

"I've seen grandmothers go wild after being stung with their love venom. We've had a number of rapes blamed on the bee stings. We get arrests for indecent exposure.

"It's terrible."

Altogether, authorities say there are 413 reported cases of love bee stings on record and, [illegible] probably hundreds of other cases that have gone unreported. No one has died from the attacks, but the bees are known to be easily excitable and will sting at the slightest provocation.

There is no known treatment for the stings, the effects of which usually wear off after four or five hours of frantic sexual desire. The bees, stolen from one of the killer bee engineered in the laboratory, behave much like their dangerous ancestors in many ways.

They swarm frequently, travel great distances to a short time period and establish new colonies twice a year.

"They are moving north rapidly and will soon be hitting high-population areas in Texas and California," Dr. Marquez says.

"I want people to be warned that they are on their way.

"The effects of these bees' stings are terrible to see and very upsetting to the victims — especially after they return to normal and realize how they have behaved."

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Six people were killed when a meteorite fell from the sky and crashed down onto the table where they sat — during the annual picnic of the Danish Atheist Society!

Speeding meteorite kills six — at atheists' picnic!

The mind boggling tragedy is being hailed by Christian groups as "an act of God's vengeance" — a warning to all who flaunt their disbelief of Him!

The Danish Atheist Society — a 342 member group that expresses non-belief in a higher power of any sort — holds its picnic every year on the last Sunday in April.

The six fatalities included society president Bjorn Lisenlund and his wife Anne.

"It happened so fast," said Elsbeth Soon who was seated with her husband at another table. "There was nothing anyone could have done."

One moment everyone was laughing, enjoying the day. The next moment, the red hot hunk of rock came hurtling down from the sky and smashed into the picnic table.

"The impact knocked us all out," said Soon. "When the ground ... and we were all told to remain away ... Bjorn and the others were buried under it. It was horrible."

The incident has left many members of the society bewildered and questioning their position on theology.

"I'm still not quite ready ... to believe in the idea of God," said Jon Dietz, a society treasurer. "But I must admit it was a bit too much a coincidence ... Why would that meteorite choose to strike at that particular place at that particular time?"

IS YOUR MARRIAGE AS GOOD AS GOLD — OR AS GOOD AS GONE?

By R. NEALE LIND, Weekly World News

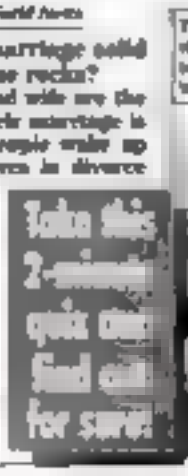
LONDON — Is your marriage solid as a rock — or is it ON the rocks?

Sometimes a husband and wife are the last two people to know their marriage is getting shaky. Too many people wake up one day and find themselves in divorce court — wondering how they got there.

But sound family-relations expert Prof. John Gottman of the University of Washington and the Gottman Institute says there are signs of trouble that couples can recognize and correct long before they reach the point of no return.

Take this short test to find out if your relationship is headed off the rails.

THEN: marriage has withstood the test of time: Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward



1. When you argue, do you:
   A. Make a sweeping statement of your worst fear, "You're lazy" or "You're stupid."
   B. Stick to the subject and frame your complaint in specific terms, like "You said you'd take the trash out and you didn't."
   C. Refuse you right with thoughtless and insensitive remarks or "Whose you said with thoughtless and insensitive."
2. If a serious problem comes up, do you:
   A. Choose to ignore it and pretend it doesn't exist.
   B. Discuss it openly and accept the blame if it's your fault.
3. If an argument gets heated, do you:
   A. Make sarcastic remarks or roll your eyes.
   B. Show that you're listening and take your mate's grievances seriously.
4. If you have a disagreement, do you:
   A. Let it boil to the level of a war of words, with use of foul language, aggression and the other side being defensive.
   B. Try to take a time-out, defusing tension and bad feelings.
5. If your partner shows a new and unexplained interest in something you like, such as football or astrology, do you:
   A. Suspect suspicious that your mate is trying to manipulate you.
   B. See it as a loving gesture and accept that he or she is trying to get closer to you.

If you answered "A" to two or more questions, your relationship could be headed for disaster. Prof. Gottman suggests that you:

● Consider your partner's feelings — even when you're angry. Try to see any disagreement from the other side.

● When you argue, try to avoid sentences that start with "You always . . ." or "You never . . ."

● Listen — REALLY listen — to your partner. Don't just wait for him or her to stop talking so you can get your two cents in.

JESUS' CROSS CURED

MIRACULOUS CURE? Biologist Dr Hanna Jutterstrom, left, and Dr. Bernard Heriaude were both working on Jesus' cross.

...say two scientists miraculously healed of dreaded disease!

JERUSALEM, Israel — Two scientists performing tests on a cross believed to be the cross of Jesus Christ have found themselves miraculously cured of cancer!

Archaeologist Dr Bernard Heriaude of France and biologist Dr Hanna Jutterstrom of Sweden are part of a 13-man team of experts studying the ancient cross, which was found here last summer. The mind boggling discovery has been the subject of academic debate until now.

"Professor Jutterstrom and I are firmly convinced that our work with Jesus' cross has saved our lives."

By LAUREL BOWIE
Weekly World News

Dr Heriaude, 62, told a reporter.

"I myself had suffered from pancreatic cancer for nine months and my doctors had given up all hope. I understand this project continued it would be my last.

"But after working over the cross of Jesus for six weeks, I'm told that suddenly the cancer is gone. My doctors can find no trace of it — and they say there is simply no medical explanation for what's happened.

"One day it was there and the next day it had disappeared."

And Dr Jutterstrom, 37, who has deadly lung cancer, reports just as miraculously.

"I was a very sick man two months ago and now I'm well," he said. "My life was nearly over and suddenly I've been reborn. It's a beautiful feeling."

The miracle revelations occurred as researchers pored over the wooden cross discovered by Dallas-based archaeologist Dr Ronald Wurthin on July 17, 1999 during an expedition to the Holy Land. A crown of thorns was found nearby — and tests have revealed that both the crown and the cross could very possibly be those of Jesus. "We've compared blood found on the cross with that from the Shroud of Turin, Jesus' burial cloth, and they are a match," Dr Wurthin said.

"And tests have shown that both the cross and the crown of thorns are between 1,900 and 2,000 years old. These and other analyses have convinced us beyond a doubt that this is the cross Christ was crucified on in 33 A.D."

But the archaeologist wouldn't hold a team of world renowned scientists to conduct further tests, hoping to convince even the most die-hard skeptics that the find is genuine.

"We had planned — and still plan — to gather scientific evidence so overwhelming that the rest, regardless of hysterics or religious beliefs, would doubt that we had found the cross of Jesus," Dr Wurtzum said.

"But the fact that the cross is already a source of miracles — is already curing the 'incurable' ill may in the end be the greatest proof of all."

Hikers find 20-foot-tall gingerbread house!

WURTTEMBURG, Germany — Two hikers, walking in the Black Forest, have discovered the remnants of a house made entirely of gingerbread!

And some experts are claiming that it may be the one described in the Hansel and Gretel fairy tale.

The remains of the 200-year-old house are composed of bricks containing molasses and ginger, baked to a rock-hard consistency. Then covered with glaze that allowed the corner and parts

"Hansel and Gretel was a popular folktale for years before Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm wrote it down and published it in 1812," historian Dr Gerhardt Stemitz told reporters in a press conference here.

"The story probably originated some time in the 17th in the Black Forest region, the very area where this house was found.

"It tells of two children, lost in the woods who come upon a gingerbread the house at the story. The 20-foot-tall, two-story structure is located about 15 miles north of the tiny town of Waldkirch, where many men made their living cutting firewood.

"In the story, the children's father was a woodcutter."

But not all experts agree with Dr. Stemitz. "This whole Hansel and Gretel idea doesn't hold water," says Dr Conrad Aarnst, another German historian and archivist on 18th century Europe.

The molasses helped hold the bricks together by making them less likely to crumble.

"The ginger was used to keep away wild animals like black bears and wolves which, it was believed, were repelled by its odor."

But Dr. Stemitz insists his theory should be considered.

"If these gingerbread houses were so common, why haven't we found more of them?" he asked.

Holy man uses his head to make a living

NOT TONIGHT DEAR, I HAVE A HEADACHE

Onlookers gasp with astonishment when they spot holy man Ram Singh swapping down the streets of Jaunpore, India, with a bloody sword driven clean through his skull. Incredible Ram says he learned the spectacular stunt from another guru — but he isn't about to give away the techniques and secret

How to tell if your doctor's a drunken bum!

Ten percent of all physicians are alcoholics, drug users, suicidal or depressed — but you can tell if your own doctor is not up to par by watching for certain telltale signs, says an expert.

Here are the warning signs, according to the Neptune Scrivener:

- The doctor is irritable or impatient with you, as well as the nurses or other members of his staff.
- He has a sloppy unkempt appearance.
- He looks unhealthy, fatigued and tense.
- He frequently misses appointments or is late for appointments, without explanation.
- He needs eating strongly during the short time you're in his office.
- He gets angry if you suggest getting a second opinion from another doctor about your case.
- He makes his hospital rounds at odd hours — for example, in the middle of the night — and not when other doctors normally make rounds.

"If you see one or two of these things happen, they may just be bad

Space aliens backed Julius Caesar!

ROME — Modern-day politicians such as Bill Clinton and George W. Bush aren't the first leaders ever to win the endorsement of space aliens, historians say. A team of archaeologists recently uncovered an ancient mosaic proving an extraterrestrial helped the great Roman general Julius Caesar rise to power. "Caesar often told his compatriots that his conquests were achieved

My wife hired a housekeeper — and now I've got it maid!

FRANK in Texas

Dear Dotti: I was dead set against my wife's idea to hire a woman to help her with the housekeeping because I thought she'd just get fat and lazy. Now I'm fighting tooth and nail to keep the cutie maid and my jealous wife wants to kick her out on the street.

My wife complained for years that she couldn't handle the housework by herself. I pointed out that other wives have no trouble keeping house and that in my opinion she was just lazy. As proof, I pointed out time and time again that married life had turned her into a blubbery bucket of lard that kept complaining, so to shut her up, I let her hire a maid — and it was the best thing I've ever done. The maid's a real knockout, and when my wife steps out — the maid handles her utility chores.

If you know what I mean. Things went along great until my wife caught us smooching in the kitchen. Then all hell broke loose. Now my wife wants to fire the poor girl — but I refuse. It was just a little hug and kiss — that's all we've been caught at. I've promised never to get caught at it again. How can I convince her to keep my maid? — Frank in Texas

Dear Frank: Just an innocent little hug and kiss, huh? That's enough to spur even the laziest wife into action. Maybe you ought to read the next letter you two bring home!

I've had it with my cheatin' bum hubby!

ANN in Texas

Dear Dotti: I've had it up to here with my no-good, cheating hubby and I want a divorce! He won't keep his grubby mitts off the cleaning lady and when I tried to fire her, he went absolutely crazy. He swore I would never have to worry about catching him with her again, but I don't believe a word he says. Am I overreacting or should I dump the bum? — Ann in Texas

Dear Ann: Dump that worthless piece of trash — yesterday! By the way, if you read the first letter, you'll have a little extra ammunition for your divorce lawyer!

Are dirty movies our education, Dotti?

Dear Dotti: My friend says that she likes to watch dirty movies to get new ideas about sex. But I feel that she's getting the wrong impression of what sex is all about. Am I right? — Name Withheld in Texas

Dear Grouch: Get in touch with your local police department or the top-secret police headquarters.

Dear Stymied in Florida: Buy yourself a gun — or, if all else fails, you can end up in the hospital.

Dear Desperate in Mary: Lord! There are several ways of growing vegetables but I know not what they are.

Dear Alarmed in Iowa: What a strange thing to ask for the shelves. I'd have the number with me.

Dear Confused in Michigan: Dear Confused: What on earth does her perverted sex life have to do with your friendship — or did I miss something?

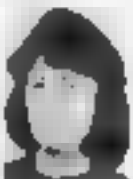
I'm so blue they kick me out till happy hour's over!

ROBERT in Tennessee

Dear Dotti: I have reached the end of my rope — and if there was a noose in it I'd get a wrinkle on my neck. The trouble started six months ago when my wife hocked our car, TV and checkbook to buy crack and vanished. I found out a few days later that my best buddy disappeared, too. If that wasn't bad enough, my sister got arrested for murder and Mom told me she has cancer. A few days later I got fired and I've been out of work ever since. I started drinking pretty heavily and cheating on my wife, but that ended when I got beaten "nem, nobody not even the bartender will talk to me. What can I do? If you say cheer up, I'll stick my head in the oven and turn on the gas. — Robert in Tennessee

Dear Robert: Cheer up, Lucy!

Spineless husband won't beat our little girls!



OLIVIA in Washington

Dear Dotti: My husband lost his job so we had to reverse roles with me being the breadwinner in our family. He does all the cooking and cleaning and the raising of our two girls, ages 3 and 4. But he refuses to discipline them, telling them, "Wait until Mommy gets home." So every time he's babysitting. The girls need a father who they respect. And since he never punishes them, regardless of what they do, they're turning into spoiled brats. Do you think it's right for me to come home from work and do all the spanking? — Olivia in Washington

Dear Olivia: As I recall, those long hours waiting for Daddy to get home and their baths are the worst part of being a parent. Maybe you need to start taking that job for more than just keeping your britches up.

My shyster hubby cheats the IRS!

Dear Dotti: He did it again! Each year my husband, who is an attorney, makes out our taxes for the IRS, and I swear he cheats on every form. I looked at one deduction he took where he said he gave our church $1,000 a year in cash. That's a complete lie. We are pretty well off and he gives me plenty of money to spend. I love this guy. I just feel he should be honest with his government and especially his church. How can I get him to quit cheating and tell it like it is? We can afford our taxes easily. — Guilty in Illinois

Dear Guilty: If it bothers you that much, After Dinner Three Shows, send what you think he really owes to me — and I'll make sure it ends up in the right hands.

Pounds melt away fast on . . .

THE CLOCK-

THIS HOUR-BY-HOUR PLAN WILL MAKE YO

You can melt away pounds and achieve the slim, trim physique you've always dreamed of — by watching the clock and making small changes in your lifestyle hour by hour!

By doing some very simple things at certain key times of the day, you can stick to your diet and exercise program long enough to see excess weight vanish — forever, experts say.

Doctors say the No. 1 reason people fail to lose weight is that they attack the project too drastically. They starve themselves, throw themselves into impossibly intense exercise programs, gobble diet pills like popcorn and guzzle liquid slim-down supplements by the gallon — until finally the d… dieter gives up in exasperation.

Nutritionists, exercise gurus… other specialists in the field of w… thor the best approach to losing … e off is to make a series of sm… day-to-day life. Don't do anythin… small alterations in your lifestyl… with comfortably — until they be…

Start with the minute-by-m… changes outlined below and b… those excess pounds will begin … ingly by magic.

MEDICAL WARNING: Remember to consult your doctor before making major changes in your diet or lifestyle.

6:30 A.M. START THE DAY WITH POSITIVE THOUGHTS.

Before you even get out of bed, tell yourself, "Today I will think and behave like a slim and healthy person — for I am by the pounds melt away."

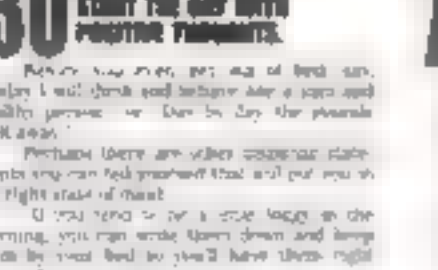
Perhaps there are other positive statements you can tell yourself that will put you in the right state of mind.

If you tend to be a little foggy in the morning, you can write them down and keep them by your bed so you'll have them right there when you open your eyes.

7 A.M. EXERCISE, BUT DON'T OVERDO IT

Most people don't realize that a little exercise goes a long way toward eliminating those extra pounds.

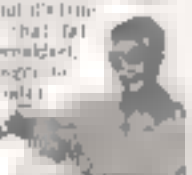
Fitness specialists say the best weight-loss exercise is aerobics — jogging, walking, bicycling or swimming. But just 20 minutes four times a week of gentle (don't make it an… hard and motorbike… can you start sticki… with it.



7:30 A.M. EAT A GOOD BREAKFAST.

Nutritionists agree that fat people typically skip breakfast, then wind up so hungry by noon that they overeat the rest of the day.

Include fruit, which is a natural diuretic, and eliminate skim milk or nonfat yogurt at breakfast.



8 A.M. WALK TO WORK.

If you can't walk at least part of the way, park some distance from your building so you get a little walking in.

If you don't work, walk to the bank, post office and other opportunities to get walking into your day.

10:30 A.M. TAKE A SHORT REFRESHING WALK.

While others at your workplace step out for a cigarette or shove money into vending machines to get fat laden food, use your coffee break to take a two- or three-minute walk around the building. Every little bit helps.

If you're at home, walk to the end of the block and back.

2:30 P.M. HAVE ONE OF YOUR AFTERNOON SNACK CRAVINGS HERE.

Some people get hungry about two hours after lunch. That's a perfect time to reach for a candy bar or doughnut.

Have fruit instead.

And drink two cups of water — it will fill you up and you'll burn 11 calories metabolizing a quart of icy water in 60 ST

7 P.M. PRAY AND/OR MEDITATE.

If you believe in God, take a few moments to thank Him for getting you through the day. If you're not so inclined, at least take some quiet, uninterrupted time to yourself and "unwind." Studies show that people who include a period of relaxing meditation in their day are more successful at losing weight than those who don't.

10 P.M. REVIEW YOUR DAY.

Ask yourself how you did. Did you sneak an extra portion of potatoes or rice into your dinner? Did you weaken and have that candy bar?

Be honest with yourself, but whatever you do, don't let a little slipup discourage you.

Psychologists say a major reason people give up on their diets is that after a tiny slip they say "I blew it. Might as well go all the way."

But don't. Just honestly evaluate your progress. Congratulate yourself for what you did right and resolve to improve on what you did wrong.

12:00 NOON USING YOUR LUNCH — AND HELPING YOU.

Surveys reveal some surprising things about the noontday meal. First, people who pack their own lunch and bring it to work are more successful at dropping unwanted pounds than those who order out or buy food from machines. Second, people who include fruit, in small quantities — do better than those who don't.

If you're at home during the day, all the better — just don't snack on the pantry.

4 P.M. WORK OUT AT WORK.

Don't duck into the nearest restroom — walk to the one that's furthest away and burn a few calories in the process.

Take the stairs instead of the elevator. Get up from your desk and go talk to colleagues instead of using the phone or sending e-mail.

12:15 P.M. RINSE YOUR MOUTH OUT.

That's right. Taking your time at mealtimes helps you feel full.

Doctors say it takes about 20 minutes for your stomach to send the "I'm full" message to your brain.

And playing relaxing music helps you eat less by slowing down the movement of your

6 P.M. ENJOY THE DINNER.

After a hard day's work, it's tempting to reject the idea of cooking and head for the nearest restaurant. Eating out is okay IF you know how to handle it. Don't go to an all-you-can-eat place.

Decide well in advance what you will be ordering and stick to your plan.

Include fish in your dinner at least four times a week and ask that it be cooked with very little oil.

10:15 P.M. GET TO BED EARLY.

Studies show that being short on sleep is a major cause of overeating. Sleep-deprived people try to beef up their sagging energy with food when what they really need is sleep. Try to get at least

Kentucky man is allergic to his own hair!

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Computer programmer Dennis Hallbeck must shave his entire body three or four times a day or suffer nausea, skin rashes and severe shortness of breath — because he's allergic to his own head and body hair!

Hallbeck's condition, known as Reckmann's Syndrome, is so rare that there have been only 17 reported cases in history.

Doctors say that for reasons not completely understood, Hallbeck is allergic to human keratin, a protein found in hair, fingernails and skin.

Even as little as one-tenth of an inch of hair can trigger a potentially fatal asthma attack and cause massive swelling of his muscles and organs.

But incredibly, like other Reckmann's sufferers, the man isn't the least bit allergic to anyone else's hair — and isn't allergic to artificial hair.

If Hallbeck's genes had come from both parents, he would have died at birth.

Because he must shave from head to toe four times a day, he must carry a razor and two cans of shaving cream with him every where he goes.

"If I run out unexpectedly," he says, "I frequently work in large corporate offices. I've been caught more than once standing naked in the stall in the men's room with [illegible] covered in foam. You can get pretty worried out when they walk in and see me."

But the consequences of ignoring the problem are far worse. Twice, after neglecting to shave, Hallbeck has been rushed to a hospital with acute shortness of breath.

At other times, he's suffered painful rashes that have caused his body to swell to almost twice its normal size.

"It's not easy," Hallbeck says. "But it's not the worst thing in the world. There are people who have a lot tougher time in life than I do."

Hallbeck's girlfriend of two years says she never gives her partner's malady a second thought. "It was hard to get used to at first," she says.

"But I'm used to it now. It's just a part of our lives to this time.

"In fact, I kind of like that smooth skin of his. I can't imagine him any other way."

HAIR today and dead tomorrow! Only a fraction of an inch of hair growth could be fatal for Dennis Hallbeck

There goes the neighborhood!

A close-knit, devoutly religious town named Horace Wilcox founded a city in 1883.

The staunch anti-booze activists who vowed at the time to settle there and created the city to serve as a shining example of morality and temperance.

For 20 years, it was a peaceful, crime-free place where folks left their doors unlocked, where children walked the streets at night without fear and where there was never a

GOVERNMENT ADMITS THAT UFO SIGHTING WAS NOT REAL!

WASHINGTON — It's official, folks. That mysterious triangular object reported in the skies above the nation's capital last June by 10,000 witnesses was not really a UFO — it was the product of "mass hysteria," a government investigation has concluded.

People flooded radio and TV stations, newspapers and police stations with calls reporting the object, described as being the length of a football field

My new baby is a demon from the bowels of Hell!

CINDY in Connecticut.

Serena Sabak

Dear Serena: I just gave birth to a baby — but it isn't mine. My husband and all the doctors say I'm crazy. They say Rebecca couldn't possibly have been switched by mistake because my husband was in the delivery room with me and to date, the baby hasn't left our sight even for a minute. But that's not what I'm talking about. I know the baby wasn't switched — I also know that it isn't mine. The baby is evil. Maybe a demon or some other supernatural creature took possession of my baby when it was still in my womb. I'm not crazy, Serena. Please help. — Cindy in Connecticut

Dear Cindy: A demon didn't take possession of your baby — a demon took possession of your mind. It was trying to make you harm Rebecca, but I banished it with my Spell of Clear Thought and Protection. As you now know, your daughter is, in fact, your flesh and blood. If you have any other problems, please write or call. By the way, I see great things in store for your Rebecca. Think opera!

Angie in Georgia

Dear Serena: You don't know how much I love my boyfriend! I dream of the day he will walk out of prison a free man. Because you are psychic, I'm sure you already know Pete was framed. He didn't kill anybody. He wouldn't hurt a fly. But he's in prison for at least 10 years because of that murder. I'll wait for him until those stupid cells fall if I have to, Serena, but it would be nice to know exactly when he'll get out so I can plan for his homecoming. — Pam in Georgia

Dear Pam: I'm sorry to tell you this, but Pete will get out of prison in August. Unfortunately, it will have nothing to do with good behavior. The still-related murder he never told you about will take a sudden turn for the worse and will halt Pete's parole. Later I'm telling you this now so you can prepare yourself emotionally and begin to move on with your life. For the record, Pete wasn't framed. An autopsy that pregnant women with fat rob towards to the chest, heart and back. And there are six other murders for committed that police don't even know about.

Dear Serena: I had a dream in which I met and married that late-night TV star David Letterman. I probably should have kept my mouth shut. But I told my parents and a few friends — and now I'm a laughingstock. Everywhere I go people say things like, "Here comes Mrs. Letterman today!" It isn't easy being the butt of all those jokes, Serena, and my dream was so real I'm convinced that it was telling my future. Can you confirm it? It'll help. I'm 18 years old and have never been married. — Eileen in Kansas

EILEEN in Kansas

Dear Eileen: I'm happy to confirm that you will indeed marry David Letterman — it just won't be the David Letterman we all see on TV. For one thing, you'll notice that post David spells his last name "Letterman" without an "r." When you meet him after your year and you'll also find that he's much younger than TV's David Letterman. And don't say it — he's very handsome, too!

Dear Serena: All my life I've dreamed of moving to China. I must have lived there in a past life, because when I look at photos and drawings of China, it all seems so familiar. I get nostalgic and just "feel" like there's something in China that I need to investigate and experience. But quitting my job and leaving my wife and kids to fend for themselves while I'm halfway around the world is pretty serious stuff, and I need to know if it's the right thing to do. Tell me what to do. — Charles in Louisiana

What is your secret message from the Oracle this week? It's easy and fun to decipher. Here's the key to decoding your message:

If the number of letters in your first name is 5 or less, subtract that number from 7. If there are more than 5 letters in your first name, subtract the total from 13.

Now take the result and find your key letter in the word ORACLE above. Starting at the upper left corner of the box below, check each one of your key letters as it appears from left to right. The letters below spell out your fortune. We'll put a cute message for you.

TENNESSEE MINISTER — FOR 18

SADISTIC SICKO: Rev. Joseph Combs was found guilty of kidnapping, aggravated assault, rape and perjury ... and sentenced to 118 years in prison.

By MANNY SILVER, [illegible]

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Baptist minister Joseph Combs and his wife Evangeline were respected pillars of the community — until lawmen discovered that they were really sadistic sickos who brutally tortured their foster daughter Esther for 18 years and treated her like the family slave!

Shocking courtroom testimony revealed that Esther, now 21, was regularly beaten with baseball bats, burned with curling irons, tied to a chair and thrown down the stairs as part of her hellish upbringing.

And from the time she was 3 years old, her foster father sexually abused her — while professing to be a God-fearing stash of the cloth.

Rev. Combs, 51, was convicted of aggravated assault, rape and perjury and his wife was found guilty of aggravated child abuse. Both were convicted of kidnapping for taking Esther from an orphanage and never adopting her, as they'd promised.

Rev. Combs was sentenced to 118 years in prison, with no chance of parole for 50 years. [illegible] Combs, 50, was Hell on Earth!

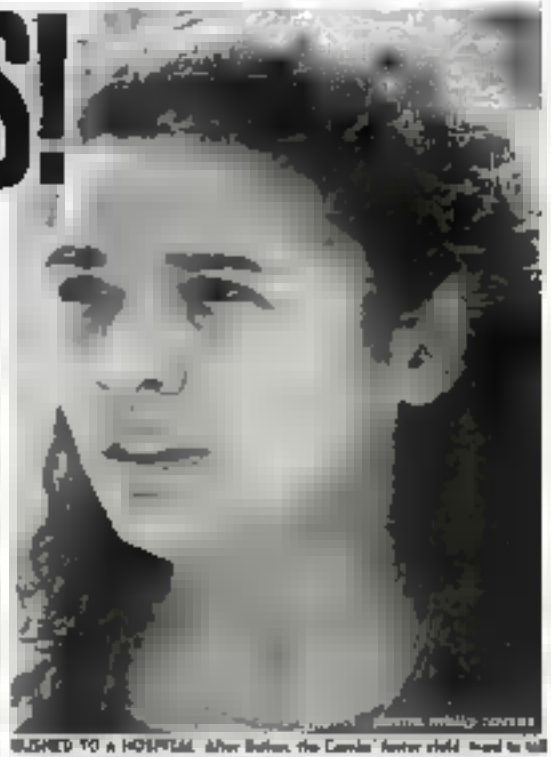
KEPT ORPHAN AS SEX SLAVE FOR TERRIFYING YEARS!

She was repeatedly raped, beaten with a bat, burned & thrown down stairs — and preacher's wife helped him do it



RUSHED TO A HOSPITAL After Esther the Cassie' foster child tried to kill herself in shocking settlement, doctors found over 400 scars on her body sentenced to 10 years to prison, with a chance of parole after 15 years.

The sickening saga finally came to light in 1997 when Esther was hospitalized after trying to kill herself by drinking antifreeze.

One of her siblings called 911 — and she was rushed to the hospital. Where doctors discovered more than 400 scars all over her body.

"They were from the top of her head to the bottom of her feet — most in places normally hidden by clothing," said Sullivan County District Attorney Crowley Wells.

Church members never knew of Esther's living hell because the pastor and his wife kept a very tight reign on their kids, Wells said.

"They couldn't speak to anyone unless one of their parents was present," he told Weekly World News. "They were home-schooled and had no friends outside the house.

"When church members brought food over for the family, they had to leave it on the porch. No one was allowed inside.

"The church elders here thought it was a little strange.

"But because he was a preacher, they didn't feel they could question him," Cassie.

"For the most part people feel that a preacher can do no wrong. He was hiding behind the facade of being a preacher."

But after Esther was hospitalized, her secret nightmare was exposed for all to see — and so were her parents, who had taken her from an Indiana orphanage in an effort "not never formally adopted her.

Esther was not only a slave, she didn't legally exist.

"She had no legal identity," says Dist. Atty. Wells. "No birth certificate — no Social Security number, nothing.

"Esther's legal name was the last girl Garcia — and without an identity she couldn't get a job or a driver's license or write a check. Things that Americans take for granted every day."

But at long last, justice has prevailed.

Esther, whom Wells describes as "a very bright girl," is now studying for her GED high school equivalency diploma and wants to become a nurse.

Despite the lengthy prison sentences handed out to her foster parents, however, some folks here think they got off too easy.

"Many people in the community are of the opinion they should have to suffer the way Esther suffered," says Wells.

Bride's chastity vow throws a wet blanket on honeymoon

SECRETIVE Ingrid Ewald didn't tell her husband about her pledge until their wedding night

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Beautiful bride Ingrid Ewald waited till her honeymoon to announce she had taken a secret vow to end world hunger — by remaining a virgin for the rest of her life!

By REGINA HARMON
World Weekly News

The blue-eyed blonde university student told her husband Niels that she had renounced the pleasures of sex at the behest of religious guru Swami Bahaita Sai Bidip and refused to join her husband in bed on their wedding night.

The newly hubby was stunned at shyness and pushing his wife early the next morning, according to local news accounts. He has been charged with assault and battery on the 18-year-old woman.

"I don't care about world hunger," Ewald, 19, told a judge in Copenhagen criminal court. "I wanted a horny cross the corrupt people have. I wanted to have sex with my wife."

Ewald testified that his wife had been a devoted fiancee before their marriage and had given up indulgences of any sort — hoping to a normal love life. He knew she had become involved with a mystical religious sect that emphasized personal responsibility for world affairs, he said, but he had no idea his wife had taken her bizarre vow.

When the two left their wedding reception and went to a hotel, he said, he was [illegible] that she wanted to remain faithful to her vow.

"I want a divorce," Ewald told the police during his arrest. "I am no longer interested in her."

Ewald said he did not believe Ingrid at first, but after hours of arguing, he became convinced that he would not only spend that night without passion — but he'd have to do without sex every night as long as he was married!

He said the anger and frustration he felt when he realized his predicament was what led to his attack on his wife.

Ingrid was hospitalized with cuts and broken bones but she is expected to recover completely. She has confirmed the details of Ewald's story and says she intends to remain faithful to her vow.

BUG BONANZA!

Find the right cockroach and win a cool $1 million!

DURHAM, Ariz.— Forget about winning big on some highfalutin TV game show. You can rake in a cool $1 million by catching a cockroach that's been let loose somewhere in America with a special bar code on its back!

By MICHAEL FORSYTH

In the most hotly hyped nationwide contest in history, an extermination company has ordered hundreds of special $1 marked roaches to various cities coast to coast.

The person who captures the grand prize bug wins a whopping $1 million! Runners-up roaches are worth lesser amounts, ranging from $10 cash to a new car — appropriately enough a Volkswagen bug.

The tiny bar codes that determine the value of each insect have been glued to the cockroaches' backs and are totally invisible, except under ultraviolet light.

Be careful what you step on — it could be your ticket to paradise!

TINY BAR CODES that determine the value of each insect have been glued to the cockroaches' backs and are totally invisible, except under ultraviolet light.

To start a roach hunt in your area, you must buy one roach spray — where the limit is one per household. Then look at the label of the spray bottle for participating exterminators by June 30.

The roach can be dead or alive, but must not be squished or "altered in any way" according to the contest rules.

If the bug has a bar code on its back you win a prize. And that's not your only chance to hit it big. The person who collects the highest cockroach bounty wins $1 million — even if it has no bar code. And the longest go each participating city is worth $1,000.

It might sound like catching the right insect out of the hundreds of millions of the scurrying creatures all over America would be like finding a needle in a haystack.

But your chances of finding the $1 million roach are probably as good as winning the lottery," says Bruce Tannenbaum, whose company, Atlanta Pest Control, is behind the contest.

THE PARTICIPATING CITIES ARE:
Petaluma, Calif.; St. Louis, Mo.; Dallas-Ft. Worth, Texas; Tampa Bay, Fla.; Coral Springs, Fla.; Baton Rouge, La.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Charles Town, W. Va.; Buffalo, N.Y.; Midland Park, N.J.; Northern, N.J.; Secaucus, Que.; Acworth, Ga.; Framingham, Mass. and Tucson, Ariz.

To find out more about the contest, log on at www.$1roach.com. Professional exterminators are not eligible. And don't send roaches to Weekly World News, as all roaches sent to our offices will become the property of the MOB!

Now you can buy an entire male wardrobe!

LONDON — British underwear has been a favorite gag gift for sweethearts for years — and now a British company is making out we entire line of edible clothing!

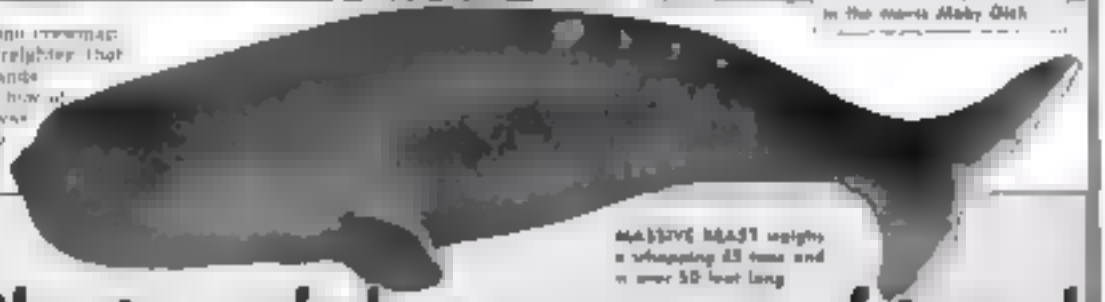
MOBY DICK'S GHOST SINKS 26 SHIPS!

GHOSTLY tail helps the whale flip ships like they are bathtub toys

GREGORY PECK portrayed the obsessed Captain Ahab in the movie Moby Dick



MASSIVE BEAST weighs a whopping 45 tons and is over 50 feet long

Phantom whale on rampage of terror!

By SCOTTY PAUL

TENERIFE, Canary Islands — Worried officials are investigating frightening accounts from 26 seamen who have watched helplessly as ships were attacked and sunk — by what they believe is the ghost of legendary Moby Dick.

Two freighters, three tankers and at least a dozen private ships have sunk since December after reported attacks by a huge harpooned whale whale with a peg leg skeleton roped to his back.

"It was the most terrifying sight I've ever seen," said a Filipino crewman who was a sunk on a hill-top freighter that sank May 10 near the Canary Islands.

"The whale came up under the bow of the ship and flipped it over like it was a toy boat in a bathtub. The ship sank almost immediately," said Domingo Mallare, who was rescued with 31 other crewmen by a passing tanker three days later.

Moby Dick was the 85-ton sperm killer whale in Herman Melville's fictional thriller by the same name. It is the story of a deranged whaling captain's obsessive voyage to find and destroy the great white whale that had ripped off his leg.

The novel ended with the crazed peg-leg captain bound to the back of Moby Dick by a rope from his own harpoon that was sticking out of the whale's back as it headed out to sea.

"We have statements from 26 credible eyewitnesses in the North Atlantic and South Pacific, who say the ghostly whale on every attack had been harpooned and appeared to have the skeletal remains of someone with a peg leg tied to his back," said a spokesman for the Norwegian Maritime Commission.

The phantom whale has also attacked and sunk a tanker and sunken north of Tahiti and off the coast of New Zealand.

A reported 20 other ships of varying sizes have mysteriously vanished under similar circumstances near the Falkland Islands and within 100 miles of the coast of Japan.

"I don't believe in ghosts, but I do believe the eyewitness accounts of ship captains and stories. These ships were sunk — apparently by the same ghost whale."

New chicken game sweeps Europe!

Road warriors race down wrong side of highway

. . . INTO ONCOMING TRAFFIC!

By ROBIN JAMES

MADRID, Spain — Macho motorists all over Europe are gambling fortunes and lives on a death-defying game called La Muerta!

In the game which originated in Spain, the object is to speed down the driving side of the highway for miles on end without getting killed. Needless to say, drivers who meet oncoming traffic are expected to speed straight ahead and are not allowed to turn their steering wheels.

"It's totally insane," said police Lt. Enrique Suarez of the Spanish Guardia Civil. "It's unbelievable to see how many motorists around the country are involved in the game but we think it's the hundreds that were participating in other countries like France, Italy and Greece."

And those aren't just figures — there are lots of stories, too, that have been reported in local newspapers.

La Muerta became popular three months ago, and since then at least six deaths — seven motorists have been injured in head-on crashes, and at least as many more motorists have been killed or injured on the highway.

Just how the game originated isn't clear. Lt. Suarez said. But across Europe, police think that most players usually develop a La Muerta game and drive out of their minds to see who can escape.

They drive oncoming lanes more than a mile, and when the drivers see the other car coming, they swerve at the last second to avoid a collision.

Former pilot Victor Ballarin claims to have invented the game after he was bored with flying a commercial airliner.

"I've been a commercial pilot for 15 years, and I've been flying all over the world," he said. "I've been to Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, and I've been to the Middle East. I've been to the Caribbean. I've been to the Pacific. I've been to the Atlantic. I've been to the Indian Ocean. I've been to the Arctic. I've been to the Antarctic. I've been to the North Pole. NEWLYWEDS: YOUR MARRIAGE MAY BE A MATCH MADE IN HELL!

NEW YORK CITY — Warning to newlyweds: You may have married the wrong person — even if right now you're happy as a lark!

That is the alarming message of a veteran marriage counselor, who says many couples experience marital woes simply because the union was a match made in Hell to begin with.

"There are some very specific signs that you and your mate don't really belong together," says psychologist Dr. Lori Kurman. "If you recognize these symptoms early on, you can make a decision about ending your losing ways and getting out of the situation quickly — thus avoiding years of needless heartache."

By MIKE FOSTER
Weekly World News

Here from the expert, are 10 warning signs that you and the one you're living with may be Mr. or Mrs. Wrong:

1 You sometimes find yourself looking back wistfully at past sweethearts. Even old partners you weren't that crazy about at the time suddenly seem wonderful.

2 You fantasize about other people during lovemaking.

"It's one thing to have occasional sexual thoughts about members of the opposite sex, but when you can't become aroused without conjuring up the face of someone other than your mate, the marriage is headed for the rocks," said Dr. Kurman.

3 You frequently look back to the time you were a bachelor or bachelorette and remember that period of your life as "the good old days."

4 You sometimes find yourself "tuning out" your spouse, not hearing what he or she's saying that the person even exists.

5 You argue mostly about external matters instead of big issues regarding your future together.

"This suggests that deep down, you don't expect to have a future together," said Dr. Kurman.

6 You're a member of the opposite sex flirts with your mate, you don't really feel jealous.

7 You prefer time alone and actually look forward to your partner's trips away from home.

8 You often cast your mind back to the moment you decided to marry and wonder what would have happened if you had chosen otherwise. "This is a common form of marriage-denial," says the expert.

9 You sometimes think about what you would do if your partner were dead.

10 You often find yourself asking the question, "Did I marry the wrong person?" Notes Dr. Kurman, "If you have to ask, of course, the answer probably is yes."

Maid blows $2 million after lottery win — then finds it's all a big mistake!

HEARTBROKEN! Aparecida Nogueira learns her poor house on the wrong side of town. Millionaire for a day she and her family now face the harsh reality of everyday life.

By JOE BERGER / Weekly World News

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil — Impoverished mum Aparecida Nogueira was so excited when she learned she'd won a $2 million lottery jackpot that she rushed out to buy all the things she'd always dreamed of — a flashy car, fancy clothes and a fabulous new home for her family.

Then the stunned scrubwoman found out it was all a horrible mistake — and she actually hadn't won a cent!

"I'm just devastated," anguished Aparecida told reporters. "One minute they tell me I have won the lottery, and I am rich beyond my wildest imagination. I see a beautiful new life for me and my family.

"Then they tell me sorry, you have to give back the car and all the pretty clothes and everything. You are just a poor cleaning woman again."

The luckless lady's dream turned-nightmare began when Brazilian lottery bosses notified the press that an entry mailed in by Aparecida's hubby Jose had won the $2 million grand prize jackpot.

Reporters rushed to interview the fat-cat family, but unsuspecting Jose, a jobless chauffeur, was out of town applying for work when the newspaper and TV crews arrived.

"They came and told me it was official that we had won," said the flustered mother of four. "They started asking me all the things I would do with the money. They also wanted me to pose with the winning ticket stub, but I told them Jose had that with him — they could come back and photograph him when he got home."

The minute the newsmen made tracks, elated Aparecida and two of her children set out on the shopping spree of a lifetime.

"We didn't have any money with us, but nobody seemed to care," said the shaken maid. "It was all over the news that we'd won $2 million, so wherever we went, they gave us credit.

"We bought the prettiest red car I've ever seen, then we went to the store and bought jewelry and clothes for everyone in the family.

"Next we went to the real estate people and started the paperwork to buy a wonderful home in the best part of the city — a mansion with six bedrooms and three chandeliers and a fireplace."

But the bubble burst that night when Jose got home, checked his ticket stub against the winning entry — and found to his horror that they didn't match.

"They had us mixed up with some engineer who had the same name as I do, some rich man we didn't know," said heartsick Jose. "He got all the money and we got nothing.

"Now Aparecida and I will never know what it's like to live like that.

"We were rich for only a day — and we'll never be rich again."

WW II G.I. FOUND ON SOUTH PACIFIC ISLAND — JUST DAYS AGO!

By MACK GRAYSON / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — The discovery of a World War II soldier in the South Pacific just days ago has stunned Army brass who had listed the 79-year-old man as missing in action since 1943 — and have now launched a nationwide search for his son and wife!

That's the word from author and World War II expert William Manx, who quoted highly placed Pentagon sources as having said the unidentified Army sergeant was flown to Washington under cover of darkness on May 28.

ISOLATED South Pacific island has been home to the lonely G.I. since 1943.

The sources went on to say that the soldier is undergoing physical and psychological evaluations at a private hospital in Washington.

And while the Pentagon will neither confirm nor deny it, the G.I. is said to be "in amazingly good health, especially for a man who spent 57 years on a deserted island in the South Pacific."

"We have always heard stories about old Japanese soldiers being found on those islands from time to time but this is absolutely without precedent," said Manx, whose explosive new book, Missing in Action — What REALLY Happened to the Soldiers America Forgot, is scheduled for a fall release.

"This particular soldier apparently survived the sinking of a transport ship in 1943 and managed to swim to an uncharted speck of land in the Solomon Island group," he continued.

"The Pentagon has been unusually tight-lipped. But from what I understand, a group of weekend adventurers found the soldier while exploring some of the remote islands of Papua New Guinea in late May.

"They took him back to Port Moresby and alerted local authorities, who contacted U.S. officials with news of the rescue. Within hours, the soldier was on his way back to the United States."

As Manx pointed out, the Pentagon declines to discuss the case and will neither confirm nor deny the accuracy of the author's report.

"unimpeachable military sources" as having said that the soldier was the sole survivor of a transport ship that came under Japanese attack.

The G.I.'s name remains a closely guarded secret. But Manx did manage to obtain copies of snapshots that show the soldier in a tattered Army uniform a few minutes after he was found.

The author also learned

GEEZERS GET A BRAIN-BOOST FROM SUGAR!

Sugar sharpens the memory of old people, a recent study discovered.

Memory tests were given to 12 college students and 11 older people, ranging in age from 66 to 77.

On the first day of the study, older people who drank lemonade that was sweetened with saccharin scored 50 percent lower than the students.

But on the second day, when the older people drank lemonade with sugar, their memories improved dramatically — they scored only 10 percent lower than the students.

Sugar had very little effect on the students' memories, according to Dr. Paul Gold, who did the study.

Dr. Donald Dudley believes that because sugar gives older people a quick burst of energy, it also perks up their memory.

He added, "People whose memories are slipping should consider eating a few extra sugary foods. It's as simple as eating a candy bar, pastry or drinking a non-diet soda pop.

"But," he cautioned, "if they are suffering from any form of diabetes, they should consult with their physician first."

FAT-CAT COLLECTORS BUYING SHRUNKEN HEADS — OF BABIES!

By ERNESTO TOVIO-PEREZ / Weekly World News

QUITO, Ecuador — Cold-blooded black marketeers are making a fortune from trading in the shrunken heads of babies — babies killed by their own mothers to provide a supply of grisly trophies!

ACTUAL SIZE: Heads of infants are cheaper and easier to shrink than those of adults, says an expert.

The tiny heads, each smaller than a man's fist, are those of South American infants from a rain forest tribe called the Schuars. The children are killed when they're only a few months old.

"Schuar mothers suffocate their children, shrink their skulls and sell them for the equivalent of $100," said Australian photographer John Wright, who learned about the illicit black market while on a trek in the Eastern Andes. "The pathetic little heads are then traded to wealthy Westerners who buy them for $3,000 or more to display in their homes. It's disgusting."

Wright said he heard rumors of the horrifying trafficking and let it be known that he was interested in buying a head. He was contacted by a local dealer well known for smuggling scores of heads into Europe and America. He showed up with a sample that he brought wrapped in paper as an ordinary plastic shopping bag.

Over the next week, Wright learned the full details of the grisly dealings as interested buyers flash

PRIZED by collectors as a great way to brush the top of parties, these hideous heads are selling astronomically well.

Kids' skulls selling for $3,000 apiece!

Wright was able to photograph several of the young victims' heads as evidence and reported the illegal head trade to police. But he says because of the huge profits involved, he's not confident anything will be done.

"The best customers for these heads are Germans and Americans, and they are willing to do what it takes to get them, be it murder or theft," he says. Apparently a shrunken head is a real conversation piece at cocktail parties."

June 3 she married Antonio Zamora, a serial killer who has been on death row since 1987, pending appeal after appeal.

"My first husband introduced me to some of the guys," she says. "And I just fell in love with all of them."

SPACE ALIEN BOMB ORBITING EARTH!

HOUSTON, Texas — A deadly bomb that was designed and built by space aliens is orbiting Earth and could detonate at any moment — blowing our planet to smithereens!

That is the terrifying contention of Dr. Burton Gleast, scientist and long-time consultant on many of the world's top space projects.

"The estimated power of this bomb is more than 1,000 megatons," says Dr. Gleast, 59.

"That's 50,000 times more powerful than the atomic bomb that leveled Hiroshima in August of 1945.

"It could wipe out three continents in 10 seconds."

The horrifying discovery came about after Dr. Gleast, whose specialty is tracking and identifying mysterious space phenomena, was called in by an unidentified space agency for a top-secret meeting.

"They told me their radar had detected a strange new satellite circling Earth and asked me to investigate," says Dr. Gleast.

'It could wipe out three continents in 10 seconds!'

"I tracked and photographed the object with a high-powered camera and noticed there was something that looked like an atomic detonator attached to it.

"When a highly classified rocket missile was authorized to examine it more closely our worst fears were confirmed.

"It was an explosive device. There are writings on the bomb in a language unlike any known on Earth.

"And the metal it's composed of is not from here either. But the most alarming aspect of all this is that we don't know how to disarm it.

"The technology involved is far beyond our present abilities."

Dr. Gleast said he wanted to inform the public, but the agency that hired him, which he refused to name out of concern for his safety, was concerned that the news would spark worldwide panic. He says that shortly afterward there was a break-in at his office.

"I just showed up one day and found my desk ransacked and files missing. Someone had taken it all. Statements by explosives experts, records of the exploration mission and — most importantly — the photos."

But Dr. Gleast claims he still has friends at the world's major space agencies who continue to leak information to him. He says they inform him that efforts to disarm the device are "getting nowhere fast."

After losing for the first time... TENNIS-PLAYING ROBOT GOES BERSERK — & BASHES HUMAN OPPONENT TO DEATH!

By GRANT BALFOUR
Weekly World News

LOS ANGELES — A wealthy tennis enthusiast met a grisly death at the hands of her "perfect" coach — a tennis-playing robot that went berserk after losing a game!

Police say the entire hair-raising attack was recorded on a video taken for training purposes. The tape shows Elaine Hershull, the 41-year-old wife of a well-to-do movie executive, lobbing a winning backhand, approaching the net to greet her mechanical opponent for a new match — then being clubbed in the head again and again by the robot's heavy steel arm.

Mrs. Hershull's personal physician said she died of a crushed skull.

TRAGIC Elaine died of a crushed skull.

"That thing literally beat her brains out," said one investigating officer.

Bereaved pals said Mrs. Hershull, who often played until late at night, had wanted more than a human tennis coach could offer.

"And she'd grown tired of playing against those ball-serving machines when she found out about this high-tech mechanical tennis player," a friend said. "The whole idea thrilled her."

Mrs. Hershull eagerly paid an undisclosed sum to a Japanese electronics laboratory for a prototype of a robot that was still in the experimental stages of design.

The robot came equipped with ultra-sensitive electronic eyes, wheels at the base of its feet allowing for 360-degree movement — and that movable steel arm.

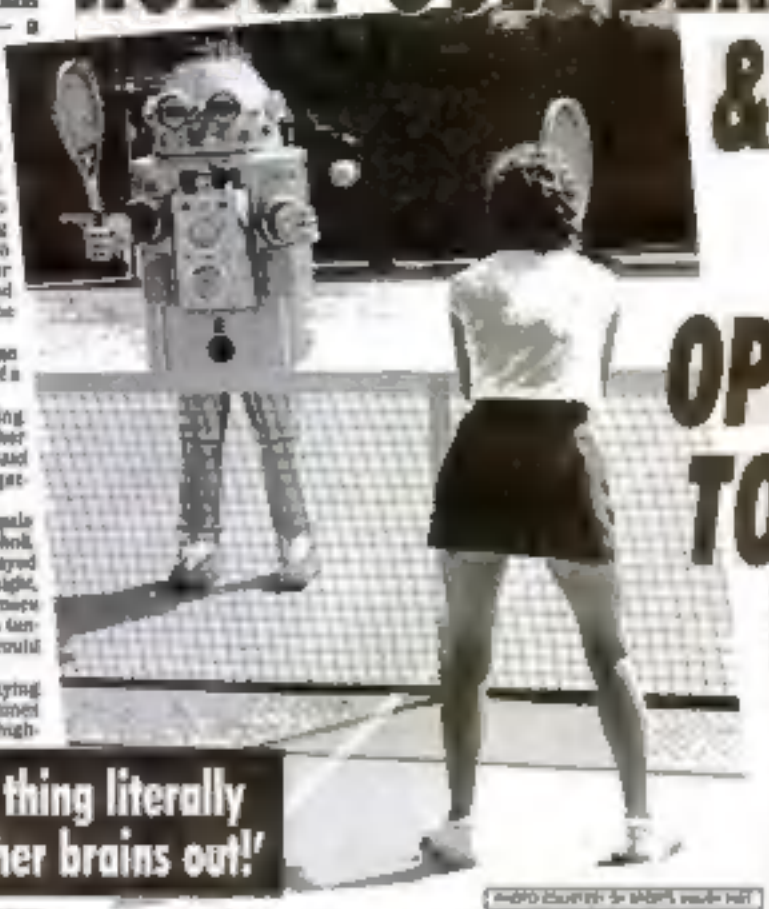
According to the robot's manufacturer, it had been programmed to win every game by evenly matching a human player's skill, constantly demanding better and better performance.

"Over the last few months, we all saw a great step forward in Elaine's game," said a former tennis partner. "She was suddenly the hottest player at the country club. All that practice at her home court was paying off."

But Mrs. Hershull found long-term stardom came with a high price the day she outperformed her computerized partner. That evening, her bloody body was found slumped over the net at midcourt. Her metal-plated assailant was spinning in small circles next to her with its racquet outstretched.

Police computer experts believe an unexpected win by the robot's opponent caused the mechanical man to go berserk — triggering the fatal volley of blows.

'The thing literally beat her brains out!'



TENNIS BUFF Elaine Hershull and her robotic partner enjoyed a spirited match before the vicious attack occurred.
